NEW YORK POLITICS.

THE WHIG CONVENTION AT SYRACUSE.

SKETCH OF THE DEBATES.

THE ABOLITION CONVENTION AT CANASTOTA.

The Hard Shell Primary Elections in this City.

The Whig State Convention.

THE LATE RECONCILIATION IN SYRACUSE—SPICY DEBATES AND BOX MOTES.

We gave in yesterday's Herald a full telegraphic report of the proceedings of this body, but as there were a few errors in that report we make extracts from our special correspondents' notes.

After the nomination of Mr. Leavenworth for Secretary of State.

Mr. CAMDEN, of Erie, said that the friends of Mr. Paulding had not thought of him in connection with any other office than that of Comptroller. But a few minutes ago a telegraphic despatch had been received from him, placing him in the hands of his friends. The people of the western part of the State desired that a member of the Canal Board should be located at that end of the canal. He would move that Mr. Paulding should be nominated for State Treasurer by acclamation and unanimously. (Applause.)

Mr. SMITH, of New York—I second that motion on the part of the New York delegation, and I have no doubt that the people will be satisfied with it.

Mr. CAMDEN, of New York—Does the gentleman speak in the name of the New York delegation?

Mr. SMITH—Well, a few of them. I don't know that Mr. Paulding has any more claims on this Convention than any other honorable man. If the gentleman gets the nomination by ballot I am satisfied. (Applause.)

MARY VANCE—"Ballot!" "Ballot!"

THE PRESIDENT—The Convention will proceed to ballot. Mr. Paulding was nominated on the first ballot.

On the first ballot for Attorney General 128 votes were cast.

A VOICE—Are there as many as 128 delegates present?

THE PRESIDENT—How many have answered to their names?

Mr. MORGAN, (teller)—The friends of the candidates at the balloting away, and we had no time to count them.

—Oh, well, if there is any objection I'll draw the motion.

The Convention then proceeded to ballot again, with a same result.

Mr. GRAY, of New York, urged the claims of Mr. Ullin, and said he was the candidate of a majority of the New York delegation, where he resided.

There is no candidate of the New York delegation, I am not a delegate of the New York delegation, and I say it that his candidate is Oden Hoffman. (Applause.)

There was a great deal of noise, the delegates saying that Ullin was the candidate, and then crying out Hoffman.

The President (energetically)—I hope the Convention will come to order. (Cries of "Ballot," "Ballot," and "Hoffman.")

He then ordered the Convention to come to order.

an address which recognized the existence and integrity of the old liberty party, and repeated their principles. He wanted to try the free democracy a year longer.

The convention did not warmly second his sentiments, and the address received but a small majority. The subjects of war, tariff, internal improvements, &c., were matters of difference. Mr. S. was willing to vote for a man in favor of the tariff—others who spoke declared they would not.

A letter was read from W. W. Chapman, who belated the free democracy as having formed a run power, and adopted the Buffalo platform, being governed by availability. If they were ashamed of the temperance cause, the liberty party should be ashamed of them.

A letter was also read from C. A. Hammond, in which he suspected the liberty party had lost its savor, and was not worth maintaining.

Messrs. Norton, of Onondaga; Plumb, of New York; Gates, of Oneida; Prime, of Cazenovia; Fish, of Monroe; and Gerrit Smith, addressed the Convention against making any nominations this year.

Mr. PRYNE offered a resolution to support only such men as are true to the principles of righteous civil government, and when no party presents such men, individuals should make their own nominations.

This operated to show the sense of the meeting. The general objection to John P. Hale was his action in the Free Democratic State Convention of August 31st, moving that the resolutions in favor of the Maine law be laid on the table.

The number in attendance was small. Adjourned sine die.

Hunker Meeting at Rochester.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 6—P. M.

The adversaries are now firing a salute of one hundred guns, preparatory to a ratification meeting, to be addressed by Messrs. Dickinson, Clinton and Brady.

CITY POLITICS.

The Primary Elections of the National, alias Hard Shell Democrats.

Yesterday, in pursuance to a series of resolutions agreed to at a meeting of the Democratic Republican General Committee, held on the 3d inst., at the Stuyvesant Institute, Thomas J. Barr in the chair, George G. Glaser, and Wm. B. Ripley acting as secretaries, the friends of the above named party held their primary elections, from 5 to 7 P. M.

The following is the list of the delegates to be chosen on the ticket in each ward of the city.

Three delegates to a Judicial Convention, to meet at the Stuyvesant Institute, on the 10th inst., for the purpose of nominating candidates for the offices of a Justice of the Supreme Court, two Justices of the Superior Court, a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, a District Attorney, and a Governor of the State.

Five delegates from each ward, in the respective Senatorial districts, to meet in convention on the 11th inst., to nominate a candidate for the office of Senator in each of said districts.

Five delegates to an Assembly Convention, to meet on the 12th inst., to nominate candidates for the office of member of Assembly.

A committee of fifteen persons, to meet on the 13th inst., to nominate candidates for charter officers.

A committee of five persons from each district for Convention, to meet on the 12th inst., to nominate a candidate for Comptroller in said district, except in such council districts as comprise one entire ward, where the councilman shall be nominated by the Charter Convention.

There was a brisk contest, many of the wards having two distinct tickets, and in the Eleventh ward there were three separate tickets. In this latter ward there was much excitement manifested, and at one time there was an appearance of a mob about to take place, but whether any occurred or not we are unprepared to say.

At an early hour the polling place, which was a shoe-maker's store, next door to the corner of Eighth street and avenue C, was besieged by a large concourse of people. The door was, however, strongly barricaded, so that admission was an impossibility, and the balloting papers were dropped inside the store by the inspectors.

There was a great deal of excitement, and the hard-shelled Democrats of the Eleventh ward showed, by their appearance, that they had come straight away from the bench and the anvil, from the workshop and the factory, to vote their ticket. At this time of the proceedings, it was totally impossible to get near, and the voters on the outside were obliged to hand over their papers to those nearest the place to be dropped in. This kind of office was generally performed by a band of urchins, who, mounted on each other's backs, were in the front rank, and enjoyed the privilege of dropping the balloting papers inside. With the exception of this ward, where the tumult became at last so uproarious that the inspectors were obliged to adjourn to another place up the avenue, where they could be in greater tranquillity while engaged in counting the votes, we heard of no act of disturbance. Everything was done very tranquilly, though, as a matter of course, the democratic election could not be quite so quiet as the whig party, having more of the back, which latter was so quiet and so sparsely attended, that the owners of many of the places where it was held were not aware that such a thing had taken place.

The following are the successful tickets of the wards that we have been able to obtain:
